

How to Make a Coronavirus Time Capsule

You will need:

A suitable box or container for storage

Lots of memorabilia

Tape or string to seal

Bin bag to waterproof

An attic or secret cupboard for storage!

Lots of patience (so you don't open your time capsule too soon)

10 years time

Date: March 29, 2020

Author: Kids of the Wild

20 Comments

This is one of my favourite isolation activities for families and kids to make, to help banish the boredom during this crazy year of global isolation and lockdown.

Most of our children won't understand the magnitude of what they are experiencing right now so suggesting they remember it in a time capsule, to store away and open in years to come, is a brilliant idea. Imagine the memories!

These are historic days we are living through and we should definitely record the time for posterity.

I can't claim the original idea but here's a mini tutorial on how to make a time capsule with children.

You will need:

A suitable box or container for storage

Lots of memorabilia

Tape or string to seal

Bin bag to waterproof

An attic or secret cupboard for storage!

Lots of patience (so you don't open your time capsule too soon)

Journal newspaper in box with feather and shells lying on top of headline about school closure during Coronavirus Covid-19

A newspaper & beach treasures from a daily exercise walk during Covid-19 lockdown

What to do:

Collect pieces of memorabilia (see list below)

Place everything safely in the container

Secure the container with tape or string

Place it in a bin bag or plastic bag

Store securely in an attic, basement or secret Harry Potter cupboard

Wait 10 years. Can you do it??

Open your time capsule in a decade and be amazed at what's inside!

